About Brill Initial Data Sets and HPC

Bogdan Corneliu Serbanoiu[1]

[1] Center For Computation Technology,Baton Rouge, Frey Building, LA 70803, email: sbogdan@cct.lsu.edu

(Dated: February 7, 2008)

The goal of this paper is to present the physics behind Brill initial data sets as an excellent tool for numerical experiments of axisymmetric space-time, data sets which are practical application of HPC for numerical solutions of Einstein's vacuum equations.

This paper has been retracted by author because was published before passing though the quality control of Center for Computation and Technology.

arXiv:gr-qc/0404047v2 13 Apr 2004